The learning outcomes are evaluated by theory and practical examination which as assessed by summative and formative assessment. Lesson plans are prepared with specific learning outcomes which are aligned with the course outcomes.

The programme and course outcome are evidently stated in the syllabus of each programme and are displayed in the college website for the reference of the faculties and students. During the adaptation programme the niceties are informed to the students by the concerned department faculties and coordinators. Faculties are aware of both programme and course outcomes as they are involved in the teaching learning process. Orientation programme is conducted for the faculties regarding syllabus revision whenever required.

The learning outcomes are generally measured in terms of attainment of course outcomes, which are mapped to program outcomes. Action plans are written and implemented throughout the year. Individual student progress is monitored by the mentor as well as the course coordinator. Using the learning management system the performance of individual students are monitored and appropriate feedback is given. Feedback is also obtained from the students, parents, alumni and stakeholders to identify the gaps and strategies are formulated and implemented at the beginning of the next academic year. The cognitive, affective and psychomotor domains are evaluated by exam, direct observation, and structured evaluation with checklists. The attainment of outcomes and course outcomes are evaluated by means of direct and indirect assessment methods. Direct assessment methods includes of weekly test, 3 internal assessment examination and 1 model examination. Online exam scores are also included. Apart from these, assignments,
